WILL BE A LEGAL CONTEST

ILLINOIS ROADS TO FIGHT RULINGS OF STATE COMMISSION.

Railroad Construction Checked by ployes in Service on Roads.

Traffic officials of the railways of Illinois are protesting against the order of the state commission reducing rates 25 per cent. It is the first severe blow given to the policy of advance in rates that the railroads have had for two or three years. and traffic officials think it an outrage, declaring that its effect upon revenues will be disastrous. They threaten that if all class rates must be reduced they will cancel all commodity rates on raw material to manufacturers. It is claimed that this will affect every city in Illinois and benefit St. Louis, Milwaukee, St. Paul and other cities to which interstate rates apply. It is asserted that short-distance rates are no higher in Illinois than in other States. The railroads, it is understood, have decided to make a legal fight against the order of the commission by refusing to obey it and engaging in a contest when the commission undertakes by legal process to enforce the reduction. Furthermore, in the face of this action of the state commission, it is recalled that preparations are under way for a further advance in rates that would have been put in effect by this time had the general freight agents carried out instructions of superior officers. It was mentioned recently that they were ordered to arrange a cancellation of all so-called commodity rates, but of 150 they only reported the removal of seventeen. Scarcity of Steel Rails.

General managers of some of the leading lines fear they may have to abandon to a considerable extent the laying of new steel the present year or else go abroad for their rails. This statement is made on what appears to be good authority. It is estimated that while the United States will, during the coming year, produce 3,200,-000 tons of steel rail, to carry out contemplated improvements 4,000,000 tons will be required. It was expected early in the year that the railroads of the United States would about use the production of the mills and that that would be equal to the demand. But it is already clear that the demand will exceed the supply. The extensions during the year will require a heavy tonnage of new steel, and the mills are already overcrowded with orders and are constantly receiving inquiries from im-portant roads as to what they can do in furnishing new rails. The Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the Erie, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Chesapeake & Ohio have placed large orders already, and the entire output of the mills for the present year is practically purchased.

Switching Charges Raised. General managers of Chicago lines were served with notices Thursday that the Chicago Junction Railway had raised its switching charges, the increase amounting in all cases to at least 25 per cent. Accompanying the notice was the explanation that the expenses of the junction company had increased much faster than its revenue, and there was no recourse but to raise switching charges. The railroads viewed the action of the company with some alarm, for unless they feel that they can add the increased charges to the freight it will in the aggregate be a large increase in expenses. For the purpose of considering the matter a meeting of the General Managers' Association was called and a committee was ap-pointed to look into the matter and see whether the Chicago Junction cannot be induced to withdraw its notice. The increased rates embarrass the railroads especially at this time on account of the Elkins law. For years the question of switching in Chicago has been subject to a great deal of contention and trouble. Shippers have constantly complained that the switching charges were excessive and operated against the Chicago market.

No Agreement on Elkins Law. The Western Passenger Association meeting adjourned at Chicago on Thursday, unable to reach an agreement regarding the Elkins law. One of the railroads, it is said, will institute a test case for the sole purpose of obtaining a decision on the law. It was decided to have the chairman prepare a circular of instruction regarding the law, which will be sent to each passenger agent for the purpose of having him revise it. It was further decided to amend the rules of the association so that army and navy officers, their wives and members of their families, can no longer get half-rate transportation when traveling on their own access baggage charge from 15 to 25 cents was canceled. A rate of one fare plus $2 for the round trip was granted for the express business in the West, who for twenty-two years was route agent of the United Express Company on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, recently underwent a difficult surgical operation, and there was little hope of his recovery, but he has resumed active duty. He has been appointed agent at East Norwood, O. The American Express Company has closed a contract to operate exclusively the express service over the Kansas City, Fort Stillwell & Orient Railroad. The full length of the road when completed will be about 1,600 miles and the entire line will be completed within three years. The American Express Company will then have service from ocean to ocean and will largely increase its business. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton and the Monon have leased a room on the ground floor of the Claypool Hotel for offices and expect to have them completed by May 1. The companies contemplate having the finest offices in the city. The furniture will be mahogany, and much marble will be used in the construction. The offices will be occupied by both the passenger and freight departments. The Erie has an entirely new line of cafe cars, which are being installed. These are among the handsomest cars ever constructed, equaling in every respect those recently placed in service on the Lake Shore, which are considered the acme of elegance. There is considerable rivalry between these two roads in this line of service, the Lake Shore for years having held the prestige in dining and cafe car services. The Scientific American publishes a statement giving the number of railroad men employed by the roads of the country. It shows that there are 4,780 general offices, 26,606 telegraph operators, 39,701 clerk, 92,458 engineers and firemen, 116,585 conductors and tionmen, 204,194 machinists and shopmen, 459,704 trackmen and laborers. It places the value of all the railroads in the United States at $13,500,000,000. Since the 1st of February the train and station men in the passenger department of the Erie road at Jersey City and on trains running to and from that point have had their uniforms/cleaned and their shoes polished by an establishment supported by the railroad company. Each man is entitled to the privileges of this bureau, which include twenty-five shines and the cleaning and brakemen, 127,141 station agents and sta-

pressing of clothes twelve times a month. W. L. Darr is superintendent of this department and has issued a circular to trainmen requesting that they be very in their personal appearance. It is said that 99 per cent. of the men are pleased with the plan. United States Attorney Sullivan, Cleveland, by direction of Attorney Gen-eral Knox, has brought suit against the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, the New York Central, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, and the Boston &

Maine railway companies in behalf of the Interstate-commerce Commission to enforce by injunctions obedience to certain orders of the commission. These orders were issued against the companies named in a suit brought before it by the National Hay Association and decided in favor of the association on Oct. 16, 1902. Many of the railroads throughout the country have complied with the mandates of the Interstate-commerce Commission, but the defendant companies, according to Attorney Sullivan, have refused to comply. Federal Judge Wing has set June 15 for a hearing of the suit.

The report also says that the fact that there was a shortage in the funds of the Board of Public Works was known to Governor Dole, Superintendent Cooper and to ex-Attorney General Dole, and charges the above named officials with having neglected to take any action in the matter. The report also says that Governor Dole has apparently attempted to cover the matter up.

In Praise of Tobacco.

Of all the good things man has found Scattered upon this planet round, Tobacco surely holds its ground—
A weed delicious: No other green leaf yields so much Delight; no flower has fragrance such; No plant its virtue with a touch Of something vicious. A pipeful after breakfast, when I read the morning paper; then, At luncheon one small whiff again— A tube of tissue;

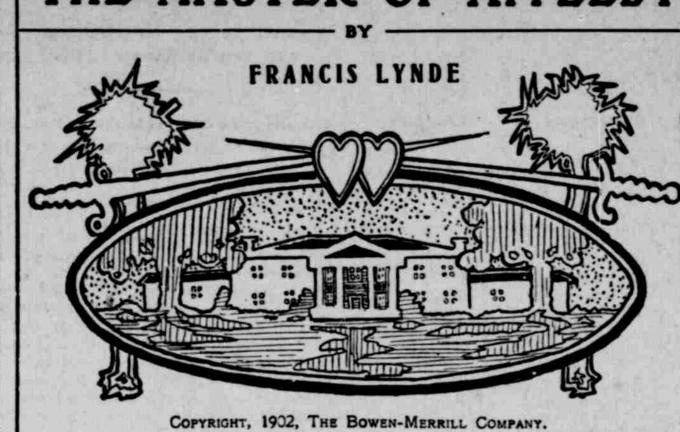

And, after dinner, a cigar, An easy chair beside the jar Wherein the good Havanas are, Life is at best a journey brief. And Time pursues us like a thief, But if one cultivate the Leaf There is no hurry. A friend, it cheers one on the way, And helps to lengthen out the day, And keeps the hair from turning gray With care and worry.

THE MASTER OF APPLEBY

CHAPTER IX.

DOOR Having my dismissal and reprieve I was remanded to the custody of that young Lieutenant Tybee whom you have met and known as Falconnet's second in the duel. Interpreting his orders liberally, he suffered me to keep my own room for the night. I had expected manacles and a roommate guard at the least, but my gentlemanly jailer spared me both. When he had me safe above stairs he barred the door upon me, set a sentry pacing back and forth in the corridor without and another to keep an eye upon the window from below, and so left me.

There was no great need for either sentry or for bolts and bars. What with the night's adventures and my scarce healed wound, I was far sped on that road which ends against the blind wall of exhaustion, as you may well suppose. For while a man may borrow strength of wine or rage or passion, these lenders are but pitiless usurers and will demand their pound of flesh; aye, and have it, too, when all the principal is spent.

so when Typee parred the door and left me with a single candle to my lighting I was fain to fall upon the bed in utter weariness, thinking that the respite bought by my sweet lady's humbling was more dearly bought than ever, and that the truest mercy would have been the rope and tree without this interval of waiting. To me in this grim doubting castle of despair the priest came. He was a good man and a true, this low-voiced missioner to the savages, and he would be a curster man than I who failed to give him his due meed of praise and love. For in this dismal interval of waiting, with death so sure and near that all the air was growing chill and lifeless at its presence, he was ready to help in time of need. If I were "heretic" to him I swear I knew it not for aught he said or did; and though I trusted that when my time was come I should stand forth with some small, simple-hearted show of courage, yet when he went away I felt I was the stronger for his coming. And this, mark you, though I was still unshriven and he had never named the churchly rite

When he was gone I fell to wearing out the time afoot; and lest you think me harder than I was, it may be said that while I did not make confession to the kindly priest, I hope I tried to make my peace with God in some such simpler fashion as our forebears did. 'Twas none so great a matter, for one who lives a soldier's life must needs be ripe for plucking hastily.

But in the final casting of accounts there was an item written down in red and one in black, and these would not be scored across for all the travail of a soul departing. The one in black was bitter sorrow for the fate from which I might not live to save my loved one; the one in red was this: that I should die and carry hence the knowledge that might else nip the Indian onfall in the bud.

No sooner was the priest away than began to upbraid myself because I had not told him of this British-Indian murder plan. And yet on second thought 'twas clear that it had been but a poor shifting of the burden to weaker shoulders, and thankless, too, for Tarleton would be sure to put him on the question rack to make him tell of all that passed between us.

As I had let him go he would have naught to tell, and so was safe where otherwise he might be hanged or buried in the hulks for knowing what I knew. No, it were best he knew it not; but how was I to rid me of this burden-of this and of that other laid upon me for my love?

The question asked itself a many a time, and was as often answerless, before there came a stir without and voices in the cor- | for me and Dick shall have it. Quick; for guessed, and so it proved, since presently I heard the clanking of the officer's sword and double footfalls minishing into silence. The sentry newly come paced back and forth to a low-hummed quickstep of his own, bestirring himself as one who, roused but now from sleep, would wake himself and be alert. He made more noise than did the other, and that is why I marked it when the footfalls ceased abruptly. A moment afterward the bar was lifted cautiously from its socket, the latch clicked gently and the door swung open. I looked. and must needs look again to make assurance sure. For on the threshold stood my ady Margery and just behind her some broad figure of a woman whom I knew for her stout Norman tiring maid. She gave me little time for any word of welcome or of deprecation. While still I stood amazed she dragged the woman in with her and closed the door. At that I found my tongue. "Margery! Why have you come?" spoke in French, and she was quick to lay a finger on her lip. "Speak to me in English if you please," she whispered. "Jeanne knows nothing and she need not know. But you ask why come; could I do less than come, dear I had always marveled that she could be so mocking hard at times and at other times-as now-so soft and gentle. And Without the night was calm and still, and through the opened casement came the measured beat of footfalls on the gravel where the outer sentry kept his watch beneath the window. Within the single canile battled feebly with the gloom and lighted naught for me save my dear lady's face, pensive now and saintly sweet as it had been that morning when I had dwelt ipon it the while she knew it not. And in the background stood the sleepy tire woman, giving no sign of life save now and then a tortured yawn behind her hand. to me, all eagerness and tremulous im-

"Now I have told you this, there is but

"Tell me-tell me instantly what I must do. I am not afraid. Shall I ride down to Jennifer House and fetch Dick here?" "He is a prisoner, and if he were not they would not let him see me. Besides, I would not let you go on such an errand. And yet -God help me, Margery! there is many an nnocent life hanging on this, the lives of helpless women and little children. Have you ever a messenger to send, a man who will risk his life and can be trusted fully?" "Yes, yes!" she cried. "Write it down ridor. It was the changing of the guard I our lady's sake, be quick about it! O

Sancta Maria, mater Dei-The low, impassioned chant of the Roman litany was ringing in my ears as I sat down to the table to write my message to Richard Jennifer. There were quills and an ink pot at hand, but no paper. I felt mechanically in my pocket and found, not some old letter, as I hoped, but the crumpled parchment map snatched and hidden when Captain Stuart had winced and dropped it at the bidding of the whistling sword about his ears. How it was they had not searched me for it I know not, though haply the captain did not guess how he had lost it. Be that as it might, I had it safe, and Dick should have it safe and use it, too, to some good purpose, as I fondly hoped. You'd hardly think from the slow and clumsy spinning of this tale that I could crowd the narrative of all that I had seen and heard into a niggard threescore words or less. But this I did, writing them upon the margin of the captain's map and not-ing in an added line the pricking out of the powder convoy's route. And while my pen was looping on the flourish to my name my eager little lady seized the pounce box, sanded me the heavy trailings of the quill, snatched and hid the parchment in her bosom and was gone.

And but for this, that I heard the door latch click behind her and then the heavy wooden bar fall into place, I might have thought the happenings of the hour the un-substantial fancies of a dream.

FRUIT IN LARGE SUPPLY

ORDERS PLENTY ON COMMISSION ROW, BUYERS NAMING PRICES.

On Commission row yesterday orders were plenty but buyers named prices and probably there was never a day when prices

Houses Overtaxed with Fruit and Vegetables-Indianapolis Grain Market-Inspection of Grain.

were more demoralized on the row than yesterday. The fact is the commission houses are overtaxed with fruits and vegetables. There never has been a time when apples and every line of vegetables were in as large supply as at the present, and apples are rotting so badly that commission merchants are anxious to dispose of them. Customers know this and are able to get good fruit practically at their own figures. Oranges and lemons are in good supply but prices are quite well maintained. Receipts of strawberries from the South were large yesterday and prices ruled easier. Receipts of green stuff of Southern growth were quite large, but this line of trade meets with better sale than does the older stock. Asparagus of South Carolina growth was offered yesterday for the first time at 40 cents a bunch. The produce market as well carries an easy tone, every article in the produce line except choice butter being easier. Live poultry is coming in now very freely and less dressed stock, but all arrivals are well taken care of. However, to make large sales prices are shaded. Eggs are weak at 11c a dozen. Arrivals are large and it is claimed that colder weather would not now affect prices so large are the holdings. The wholesale grocers are having a good run of trade. As the roads improve their orders increase. Sugars and coffees rule steady as to price, but there is no money in sugar at present figures. Canned goods are moving slow; fortunately, stocks are well reduced. The iron and steel merchants report their business at high tide. A member of one of the largest firms in the city said yesterday he had never kno their business as good in March as at the present time. He thought that the fear of an advance in prices might have something to do with the active trade. The leather market is more active and prices are very firm, with the tendency to a highfigure in some descriptions of leather. The hide market moves along much in the rut of several months past. Prices being unchanged in other lines of trade, there is nothing calling for special mention. Indianapolis Grain Market.

The Indianapolis grain market continues dull for this season of the year, chiefly on account of light receipts. There appears to be a good demand for all cereals and prices are high except on wheat for this season of the year. There should be large arrivals to meet the market, which would readily take the receipts at the following range; of prices, as bid on call and reported by the secretary of the Board of Trade:

Wheat steady; No. 2 red, 731/2c track, 731/2c on milling freight; No. 3 red, 71c track; Corn weaker; No. 1 white, 421/4c; No. 2 white, 421/4c; No. 3 white, 421/4c; No. 4 white, 40%c; No. 2 white mixed, 41%c; No. 3 white mixed, 411/2c; No. 4 white mixed, 391/2c; No. 2 yellow, 42c; No. 3 yellow, 42c; No. 4 yellow, 40c; No. 2 mixed, 41½c; No. 3 mixed, 41½c; No. 4 mixed, 391/2c; ear, 42c.

Oats steady. Inspections-Wheat: Rejected, 1 car; no established grade, 1. Corn: No. 3 white, 4 cars; No. 4 white, 1; No. 3 white mixed, 1; No. 4 white mixed, 1; No. 4 yellow, 5; No. mixed, 1; No. 3 mixed, 9; No. 4 mixed, 1; ear corn, 3. THE WAGON MARKET. Offerings on the wagon market yesterday were seventy loads, and a large per cent. of them were disposed of by 2 p. m. Corn sold at 44c to 46c per bu, oats at 38c to 42c, white oats bringing the last named figure. Some choice hay sold at $16 per ton, but most of it at $13 to $14 per ton, as reported by the wagon weighmaster.
